The first part of the Contention of the two famous Houses of Yorke and Lancaster, with the death of the good Duke Humphrey.

Enter at one doore, King Henry the sixt, and Humphrey Duke of Gloster, the Duke of Somerset, the Duke of Buckingham, Cardinall Bewford, and others.

Enter at the other doore, the Duke of Yorke, and the Marquesse of Suffolke, and Queene Margaret, and the Earle of Salisbury and Warwicke.

Suffolke.

S by your high imperiall Maiesties command,
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As Procurator for your excellency,
To marry Princes Margaret for your grace,
So in the auncient famous Citie Towres,
In presence of the Kings of France & Cyffile,
The Dukes of Orleance, Calaber, Brittainē, and Alonson.
Seuen Earles, twelue Barons, and then the reuerend Bishops,
I did performe my taske and was espousde,
And now, most humbly on my bended knees,
In sight of England and her royll Peeres,
Deliuere vp my title in the Queene,
Vnto your gracious excellency, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent:
The happiest gift that euer Marquesse gaue,

The first part of the contention of the two famous
The fairest Queene that euer King possesseſt.

King. Suffolke arise.

Welcom Queene Margaret to English Henries Court,
The greatest shew of kindnesſe yet we can bestow,
Is this kind kiffe: O gracious God of heauen,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulnesſe,
For in this beauteous face thou haſt bestowd
A world of pleasures to my perplexed soule.

Queene. Th' excessiue loue I beare vnto your grace,
Forbids me to be lauish of my tongue,
Lest I ſhould ſpeake more then beſeemes a woman:
Let this ſuffice, my bliſſe is in your liking,
And nothing can make poore Margaret miserable,
Vnlesſe the frowne of iightie Englands King.

King. Her lookes did wound, but now ſpeech doth pierce,
Louely Queene Margaret ſit downe by my ſide,
And vncle Gloſter, and you lordly Peeres,
With one voice welcomme my beloued Queene.

All. Long liue Queene Margaret Englands happiness.

Queene. We thanke you all.

Sound Truimpets.

Suffolke. My lord Protector, ſo it pleafe your grace,
Here are the Articles confirmeſt of peace,
Betweene our soueraigne and the French King Charles,
Till terme of eighteene montheſ be full expirde.

Humphrey. Inprimis, It is agreed betweene the French king Charles, and William de la Poole, Marquell of Suffolk, embafſador for Henry king of England, that the ſaid Henry ſhal wed and eſpouſe the lady Margaret, daughter to Raynard King of Naples, Cyſſels, and Ierusalem, and crown her Queen of England, ere the 20. of the next moneth.

Item. It is further agreed betweene them, that the Dutches of Anioy and of Maine, ſhalbe released and deliuereſt ouer to the King her fa.

Duke Humphrey lets it fall.

Ki. How now vnkle, whatſt the matter that you ſtay ſo ſodenly,

Hum. Pardon my Lord, a ſodain qualm came ouer my hart,

VVhich

bounches, of Yorke and Lancasters.

VVich dimmes mine eies that I can see no more,
Vnckle of Winchester I pray you reade on.

Cardinal. Item, It is further agreed betweene them, that the Dutches of Anioy, and of Maine, shal be released and deliuered ouer to the King her father, and she sent ouer of the King of Englands owne proper cost and charges without dowry.

King. They please vs well, lord Marquesse kneel down, we here create thee first Duke of Suffolke, and girt thee with the sword. Cosin of Yorke, we here discharge your grace from being Regent in the parts of France, till terme of 18. monthe be ful expirde.

Thankes vnckle Winchester, Gloster, Yorke, and Buckingham, Somerset, Salbury, and Warwicke.

VVe thanke you all for this great fauour done,
In entertainment to my princely Queene,
Come let vs in, and with all speede prouide
To see her Coronation be performinde.

*Exit King, Queene, and Suffolke, and Duke
Humphrey stayes all the rest.*

Humph. Braue Peeres of England, Pillers of the state,
To you Duke Humphrey must vnfolde his griefe,
VVhat did my brother Henry toyle himselfe,
And waste his subiects for to conquer France?
And did my brother Bedford spend his time
To keepe in awe that stout vnruley Realme?
And haue not I and mine vnckle Bewford here,
Done all we could to keepe that land in peace?
And is all our labors then spent in vaine,
For Suffolke hethe new made duke that rules the roast,
Hath giuen away for our King Henries Queene,
The Dutches of Anioy and Maine vnto her father.
Ah lords, fatall is this mariage canselling our states,
Reuersing Monuments of conquered France,
Vndoing all, as none had nere beene done.

Card. VVhy how now cosin Gloster, what needes this?
As if our King were bound vnto your will,
And might not do his will without your leaue:

The first part of the contention of the two flouris

Prowd Protector, enuy in thine eies I see,
The big swolne vemonie of thy hatefull heart,
That dare presume gainst that thy soueraigne likes.

Hum. Nay my Lord, tis not my words that troubles you,
But my presence, prowde Prelate as thou art:
But ile be gone, and giue thee leaue to speake,
Farewell my Lords, and say when I am gone,
I prophecied France would be lost ere long.

Exit Duke Humphrey.

Card. There goes our protector in a rage,
My lords, you know he is my great enemy,
And though he be Protector of the land,
And thereby couers his deceitfull thoughts,
For well you see, if he but walke the streetes,
The common people swarme about him straight,
Crying, Iesus blesse your roiall excellencie,
With God preserue the good Duke Humphrey.
And many things besides that are not knowne,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey,
But I will after him, and if I can,
Ile lay a plot to heave him from his seate.

Exit Cardinal.

Buck. Put let vs watch this haughtie Cardinall, Cosen of Somerset, be rulde by me,
Weele watch Duke Humphrey and the Cardinall too,
And put them from the marke they faine would hit.

Som. Thanks cosin Buckingham, joyne thou with me,
And both of vs with the Duke of Suffolke,
Weele quickly heave Duke Humphrey from his seate,

Buck. Content, come let vs about it straight,
For either thou or I will be Protector.

Exit Buckingham and Somerset.

Salb. Pride went before, Ambition followes after,
Whilst these do seeke their owne preferments thus,
My Lords, let vs seeke for our countries good,
Oft haue I heard this haughtie Cardinal
Swear, and forswear himselfe, and braue it out,

Morc

Actus IV. Scen. II.
The Duke of Yorke and Lancastur.

More like a Ruffin then a man of church.
Cosen Yorke, the victories thou hast wonne,
In Ireland, Normandie, and in France,
Hath wonne thec immortall praise in England.
And thou braue Warwicke, my thrice valiant sonne,
Thy simple plaineesse and thy house-keeping,
Hath wonne thec credite amongst the common sor,
The reuerence of mine age, and Neuels name,
Is of no litle force if I commaund,
Then let vs ioyne all three in one for this,
That good Duke Humphrey may his state possesse,
But wherefore weepes Warwicke my noble sonne?

War. For griefe that all is lost that Warwicke wonne.
Sonnes. Anjoy and Maine, both giuen away at once,
Why Warwick did win them, & must that then which we won with our swords, be giuen away with wordes?
Yorke. As I haue read, our Kings of England were woont to haue large dowries with their wiues, but our king Henry gives away his owne.

Salsb. Come sonnes, away, and looke vnto the maine.
War. Vnto the Maine, oh father, Maine is lost,
V~~Y~~ which Warwicke by maine force did win from France,
Maine chance father you meant, but I meane Maine,
Which I wil win from France, or els be slaine.

Exit Salsbury and Warwicke.

Yorke. Anjoy and Maine, both giuen vnto the French,
Cold newes for me, for I had hope of France,
Euen as I haue offertill England.
A day will come when Yorke shall claime his owne,
And therefore I will take the Neuels parts,
And make a shew of loue to proud Duke Humphrey;
And when I spie aduantage, claime the Crowne,
For that's the golden marke I seeke to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancaster vsurp my right,
Nor hold the scepter in his childish fist,
Nor weare the Diaderme vpon his head,
Whose church-like humours fits not for a Crowne.

Then

The first part of the contention of the two famoues

Then Yorke be still a while till time do serue,
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleepe,
To prie into the secrets of the state,
Till Henry surfeiting in ioves of loue,
With his new bride, and Englands deare bought Queene,
And Humphrey with the Peeres be falne at iarres,
Then will I raise aloft the milke-white Rose,
With whose sweete smell the ayre shall be perfumde,
And in my Standard beare the Armes of Yorke,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster:
And force perforce, Ile make him yeeld the Crowne,

Exit Yorke.

Enter Duke Humphrey, and Dame Ellanor Cobham his wife.

Elnor. Why droopes my Lord like ouer ripened corne, Hanging the head at Cearies plenteous loade?
What seest thou Duke Humphrey King Henries Crowne?
Reach at it, and if thine arme be too short,
Mine shall lengthen it. Art not thou a Prince,
Vnkle to the King and his Protector?
Then what shouldst thou lacke that might content thy mind?

Humph. My louely Nell, far be it from my heart,
To thinke of Treasons against my soueraigne lord,
But I was troubled with a dreame to night,
And God I pray, it do betide no ill.

Elnor. What dreempt my lord? Good Humphrey tel it me,
And ile interpret it, and when thats done,
Ile tell thee then what I did dreame to night.

Humph. This night when I was laid in bed, I dreamp't that
This my staffe mine Office badge in Court,
Was broke in two, and on the ends were plac'd,
The heads of the Cardinall of Winchester,
And Williams de la Poole first Duke of Suffolke.

Elnor Tush my Lord, this signifies nougħt but this,

That

bounes, of Yorke and Lancastres.

That he that breakes a sticke of Glossters groue,
Shall for th' offence make forfeit of his head.
But now my lord, ile tell you what I dreamp't,
Me thought I was in the Cathedrall Church
At Westminster, and seated in the chaire
Where the Kings and Queenes are crownde, and at my feete
Henry and Margaret with a crowne of gold,
Stood ready to set it on my princely head.

Humph. Fie Nell, ambitious woman as thou art,
Art thou not second woman in this land,
And the Protectors wife, belou'd of him,
And wilt thou still be haimmering treason thus?
Away I say, and let me heare no more.

Elnor. How now my Lord! what angry with your Nelly
For telling but her dreame? the next I haue
Ile keepe to my selfe and not be rated thus.

Humph. Nay Nell, ile giue no credit to a dreame,
But I would haue thee to thinke on no such things.

Enters a Messenger.

Messen. And it please your grace the King and Queene to morrow morning will ride a hawking to Saint Albones, and craues your companie along with them.

Humph. With all my heart, I will attend his grace:
Come Nell, thou wilt go with vs I am sure.

exit Humphrey.

Elnor. Ile come after you, for I cannot go before,
But ere it be long, ile go before them all,
Despight of all that seeke to crosse me thus,
Who is within there?

Enter sir John Hum.

VVhat sir John Hum, what newes with you?

sir John. Iesus preserue your maiesly.

Elnor. My maestie, why man I am but grace,

sir

*The first part of the contention of the two famous sir John Yea, but by the grace of God and Hums aduise,
Your graces state shall be aduanst ere long.*

Elnor. What hast thou conferd with Margery Jordane, the cunning witch of Ely, with Roger Bulimbrooke and the rest, and will they vndertake to do me good?

sir John I haue Madam, and they haue promised me to raise a spirit from the depth of vnder ground, that shall tell your grace all questions you demaund.

Elnor. Thanks good sir John, some two daies hence I gesse
Will fit our time, then see that they be here:
For now the King is riding to Saint Albons,
And all the Dukes and Earles along with him:
When they be gone, then safely they may come,
And on the backside of my Orchard here,
There cast their spells in silence of the night,
And so resolute of the thing we wish,
Till when, drinke that for my sake, and so farewell.

exit Elnor.

sir John Now sir John Hum, no words but mum,
Seale vp your lips, for you must silent be,
These gifts ere long will make me mighty rich,
The Dutches she thinkes now that all is well,
But I haue gold comes from another place,
From one that hyred me to set her on,
To plot these treasons against the King and Peeres,
And that is the mightie duke of Suffolke,
For he it is, but I must not say so,
That by my meanes must worke the Dutches fall,
Who now by coniurations thinkes to raise:
But whist sir John, no more of that I trow,
For feare you lose your head before you go.

Enter two Petitioners, and Peter the Armourers man.

I Peti. Come sirs, let vs linger here abouts a while,
Vntill my Lord Protector come this way,

That

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

That we may shew his grace our severall causes.

2 Peti. I pray God sauē the good Humphries life,
For but for him, a many were vndone,
That can get no succour in the Court,
But see where he coimes with the Queene.

Enter the Duke of Suffolke with the Queene, and they take him for Duke Humphrey, and givē him their wrisings.

1 Peti. Oh we are vndone, this is the Duke of Suffolke.

Queen Now good felows, whom would you speake withal?

2 Peti. If it please your maestie, with my Lord Protectors Grace.

Queene Are your sutes to his grace? let vs see them first,
Looke on them my Lord of Suffolke.

Suffolke. A comp'aint against the Cardinalls man,
What hath he done?

2 Peti. Mary my lord, he hath stolne away my wife,
And th'are gone togither, and I know not where to find them.

Suffolk. Hath he stolne thy wife, that's some iniury indeed,
But what say you?

Peter Thump. Mary sir I come to tell you that my master said, that the Duke of Yorke was true heire vnto the Crowne, and that the King was an usurper.

Queene An usurper thou wouldest say.

Peter Yea forsooth an usurper.

Queene Didst thou say the King was an usurper?

Peter No forsooth, I said my master said so, th'other day when we were scowring the Duke of Yorkes armour in our garret.

Suff. Yea mary this is something like,
Who's within there?

Enter one or two.

Sirra take this fellow and keepe him close,
And send out a Purseuant for his master straight,
Weele heare more of this before the King.

The first part of the contention of the two famous

Exit with the Armourers man.

Now sir whats yours? let me see it,
VVhat's here?
A complaint against the Duke of Suffolke for inclosing the commons of long Melford.
How now sir knaue?

I Peti. I beseech your grace to pardon mee, I am but a messenger for the whole towne-ship.

He teares the papers.

Suffolke. So now show your petition to Duke Humphrey.
Villaines get ye gone and come not neare the Court,
Dare these pesants write against me thus,

exeunt Petitioners.

Queene. My Lord of Suffolke, you may see by this,
The Commons loues vnto that haughtie Duke,
That seekes to him more then to King Henry,
VVhose eies are alwaies poring on his booke,
And ne're regards the honour of his name,
But still must be protected like a child,
And gouerned by that ambitious Duke,
That scarce will moue his cap nor speake to vs,
And his proud wife, high minded Elanor,
That ruffles it with such a troope of ladies,
As strangers in the Court takes her for the Queene.
The other day she vaunted to her maides,
That the very traine of her worst gowne,
Was worth more wealth then all my fathers lands,
Can any griefe of mind be like to this?
I tell thee Poole, when thou didst runne at Tilt,
And stolst away our ladies hearts in France,
I thought King Henry had beene like to thee,
Or else thou hadst not brought me out of France.

Suffolk. Madaine, content your selfe a little while,
As I was cause of your comming to England,
So wil I in England work your ful content:
And as for proud Duke Humphrey and his wife,
I haue set lime-twigs that will intangle them,

As

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

As that your grace ere long shall vnderstand.
But stay madame, here comes the King.

Enter King Henry, and the Duke of York and the Duke of Somerset on both sides of the King, whispering with him, and enter Duke Humphrey, Dame Elnor, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earle of Salsbury, the Earle of Warwicke, and the Cardinall of Winchester.

King. My lords, I care not who be Regent in Fraunce or Yorke, or Somerset, alls one to me.

Yorke. My lord, if Yorke haue ill demeande himselfe,
Let Somerset enjoy his place, and go to France.

Som. Then whom your grace thinke wothy, let him goe,
And there be made the Regent ouer the French.

Warwicke. Whom souer you account worthy,
Yorke is the worthiest.

Cardinall. Peace Warwicke, giue thy betters leaue to speak.

War. The Cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this place are thy betters farre.

War. And Warwicke may liue to be the best of all.

Queen. My Lord, in mine opinion, it were best that Somerset were regent ouer France.

Hampb. Madame, our King is old enough himselfe,
To giue his answer without your consent.

Queen. If he be bold enough, what needes your grace
To be protector ouer him so long?

Humph. Madame, I am but Protector ouer the land,
And when it please his grace, I will resigne my charge.

Suffolk. Resigne it then, for since that thou wast King,
As who is King but thee, the common state
Doth as we see all wholy go to wracke,
And millions of treasure hath beene spent,
And as for the Regent ship of France,
I say Somerset is more worthy than Yorke.

Yorke. Ile tell thee Suffolke why I am not worthy,
Because I cannot flatter as thou canst.

*The first part of the contention of the two famours
War. And yet the worthy deedes that Yorke hath done,
Should make him worthy to be honored here.*

Suff. Peace headstrong Warwick.

War. Image of pride, wherefore should I peace?

*Suff. Because here is a man accusde of Treason, Pray God the Duke of Yorke do cleare himselfe.
Ho, bring hither the Armourer and his man.*

Enter the Armourer and his man.

If it please your grace, this fellow here, hath accused his master of high Treason, and his words were these.

That the duke of Yorke was law ful heire vnto the crowne, and that your grace was an usurper.

*Yorke I beseech your grace let him haue what punishment
the law will afford, for his villany.*

King. Come hither fellow, didst thou speake these words?

Armor. An't shal please your maiesty, I never said any such matter, God is my witnesse, I am falsly accused by this villaine here.

Peter Tis no matter for that, you did say so.

Yorke I beseech your grace let him haue the law.

Armor. Alas my Lord, hang me if euer I speake these words, my accuser is my prentise, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow vpon his knees that he would be eu'en with me, I haue good witnesse of this, and therefore I beseech your maiesty do not cast away an honest man for a villaines accusation.

King Vnkle Gloster, what do you thinke of this?

*Humph. The law my Lord is this by case, it rests suspitious,
That a day of combate be appointed,
And there to trie each others right or wrong,
Which shall be on the thirtith of this month,
With Eben staues, and Standbags combatting
In Smithfield, before your Royall Maiesty.*

exit Humphrey.

Armor. And I accept the combate willingly.

Peter Alas my Lord, I am not able to fight.

Suff. You must either fight sirra, or else be hangde:

Goe

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Go take him hence againe to prison. exit with them
The Queene lets fall her gloue, and hits the Dutches of Gloster a boxe on the eare.

Queene Giue me my gloue, why minion can you not see?
She striktes her.

I crye you mercy Madame, I did mistake,
I did not thinke it had beene you.

Elnor. Did you not, proud French-woman,
Could I come neare your daintie visage with my nailes,
I'de set my ten commandements in your face.

King Be pacient gentle Aunt,
It was against her will.

Elnor Against her will! good King, sheele dandle thet,
If thou wilt alwaies thus be rulde by her:
But let it rest, as sure as I do liue,
She shall not strike dame Elnor vnreuenge.

exit Elnor.

King Beleeue me my loue, thou wert much too blame,
I would not for a thousand pounds of gold,
My noble vncle had beeene here in place.

Enter Duke Humphrey

But see where he comes, I am glad he met her not:
Vnkle Gloster, what answere makes your grace
Concerning our Regent for the Realme of France?
Whom thinkes your grace is meetest for to send?

Humph. My gracious Lord, then this is my resolute,
For that these words the Armourer doth speake,
Doth breed suspition on the part of Yorke,
Let Somerset be Regent ouer the French,
Till trial's made, and Yorke may cleere himselfe.

King. Then be it so my Lord of Somerset,
We make your grace Regent ouer the French,
And to defend our rights gainst forraine foes,
And so do good vnto the Realme of France,
Make hast my Lord, tis time that you were gone,
The time of truce I thinke is full expirde.

Somer. I humbly thanke your royll maicstie,

And

The first part of the contention of the two famous
And take my leaue to poste with speede to France.

exit Somerset.

King Come vncle Gloster, now lets haue our horse,
For we will to Saint Albones presently,
Madame your hawke they say is swift of flight,
And we will trie, how she will flic to day.

exeunt omnes.

Enter Elnor, with sir John Ham, Roger Bullenbrooke a Comynner, and Margery Sourdaine a Witch.

Elnor. Here sir John, take this scrole of paper here,
Wherein is writ the questions you shall aske,
And I will stand vpon this Tower here,
And here the spirit what it saies to you,
And to my questions, write the answeres downe.

She goes vp to the Tower.

sir John. Now sirs begin and cast your spels about,
And charme the fiends for to obey your wills,
And tell Dame Elnor of the thing she askes.

Witch. Then Roger Bullenbrooke about thy taske,
And frame a circle here vpon the earth,
Whilst I thereon all prostrate on my face,
Do talke and whisper with the diuellis below,
And coniure them for to obey my will.

She lies downe vpon her face.

Bullenbrooke makes a circle.

Bullen Darke night, dread night, the silence of the night,
Wherein the Furies maske in hellish troupes,
Send vp I charge you from Sosetus lake,
The spirit Askalan to come to me,
To pierce the bowells of this centricke earth,
Aud hither come in twinkling of an eie,
Askalon, Ascenda, Ascenda.

It thunders and lightens, and then the spirit riseth vp.

spirit. Now Bullenbrooke, what wouldst thou haue me do?
Bullen. First, of the King, what shall become of him?

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Spiritu. The Duke yet liues that Henry shall depose,
Yet him out liue, and die a violent death.

Bullen. What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolke?

Spiritu. By water he shall die, and take his end.

Bullen. What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?

Spiritu. Let him shun castles, safer shal he be vpon the sandy plaines, where castles inounted stand.

Now question me no more, for I must hence againe.

He sinkes downe againe.

Bullen. Then downe I say, vnto the damned poole,
Where Pluto in his firie waggon sits,
Riding amidst the singde and parched smoakes,
The Rode of Dytas by the riuier Styx,
There howle and burne for euer in those flames,
Rise Iordan, rise, and stay thy charming spells:
Sonnes, we are betraide.

Enter the Duke of Yorke, and the duke of Buckingham and others.

Yorke. Come sirs, lay hands on them, and bind them sure,
This time was well watcht: what Madame, are you there?
This will be great credit for your husband,
That you are plotting treasons thus with Coniurors,
The King shall haue a notice of this thing.

exit Elnor above.

Buck. See here my Lord! what the diuell hath writ.

Yorke. Giue it me my Lord, ile shew it to the King:
Go sirs, see them fast lockt in prison.

exit with them.

Buck. My Lord, I pray you let me go posste vnto the King,
Vnto Saint Albones, to tell this newes.

Yorke. Content away then, about it straight.

Buck. Farewell my Lord.

exit Buckingham.

Yorke. Who's within there?

Enter one.

One. My Lord.

C

Yorke.

The first part of the contention of the two famones
Yorke Sirra go will the Earle of Salsbury and Warwicke, to sup with me to night. exi<sup>u</sup> Yorke.
One I will my lord. exit.

Enter the King and Queene with her hawke on her fist, and Duke Humphrey and Suffolke, and the Cardinall, as if they came from hawking.

Queene My lord, how did your grace like this last flight?
But as I cast her off the wind did rise,
And twas ten to one old Ione had not gone out.

King How wonderfull the Lords workes are on earth,
Euen in these seely creatures of his hands!
Vnkle Gloster, how hie your hawke did soare,
And on a sodain fowst the partridge downe.

Suff No manuel, if it please your maiestie,
My lord Protectors hawke doe towre so well,
He knowes his master loues to be aloft.

Hum. Faith my Lord it is but a base mind,
That can soare no higher then a Faulcons pitch.

Card. I thought your grace would be aboue the clowdes.

Hum. Yea my lord Cardinall, were it not good
Your grace could flie to heauen.

Card. Thy heauen is on earth thy wrods and thoughts beat on a crowne, proud Protector dangerous Peere, to smooth it thus with King and common-wealth.

Hum. How now my lord, why this is more then needes, church-men so hote! good vnkle can you dote?

Suff. Why not? hauing so good a quarrel, and so bad a cause.

Hum. As how, my lord?

Suff. As you, my lord, and it like your Lordly lords Protectorship.

Hum. Why Suffolke, England knowes thy insolence.

Queen And thy ambition Gloster.

King. Cease gentle Queene, and whet not on these furious Lords to wrath, for blessed are the peace-makers on earth.

Car

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Card. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud Protector with my sword.

Hum. Faith holy vncle, I would it were come to that.

Card. Euen when thou darest.

Hum. Dare ! I tell thee Priest , Plantagenets could never brooke the dare.

Card. I am Plantaganet as well as thou, and son to John of Gaunt.

Hum. In Bastardie.

Card. I scorne thy words.

Hum. Make vp no factious numbers, but euen in thine own person meeete me at the East end of the groue.

Card. Heres my hand, I will.

King Why how now Lords?

Card. Faith cosin Gloster , had not your man cast off so soon, we had had more sport to day, come with thy sword and buckler.

Hum. Faith priest ile shauue your crowne.

Card. Protector, protect thy selfe well.

King The wind growes high, so doth your color, lords.

Enter one crying, a myracle.

How now! now sirra, what miracle is it?

One And it please your grace, there is a man that came blind to saint Albons, and hath receiuied his sight at his shrine.

King Go fetch him hither , that we may glorifie the Lord with him.

Enter the Mayor of saint Albons, and his brethren with musicke,
bearing the man that had beeene blind, betweene
two in a chaire.

King Thou happy man, giue God eternall praise,
For he it is, that thus hath helped thee.

Humphrey Where wast thou borne?

poore man At Barwicke sir, in the North.

Hum. At Barwicke, and come thus far for help?

poore. Yea sir, it was told me in my sleepe,
That sweet saint Albons, should giue me my sight againe.

Hum. What art thou lame too?

The first part of the contention of the two famouſe

Poore man Yea indeed ſir, God help me.
Humphrey How camſt thou lame?
Poore man With falling off on a plum-tree.
Humphrey Wart thou blind, and would clime plum-trees?
Poore man Neuer but once ſir in all my life,
My wife did long for plums.
Humphrey But tell me, wart thou borne blind?
Poore man Yea truly ſir.
Woman Yea indeed ſir, he was borne blind.
Humphrey What art thou, his mother?
Woman His wife ſir.
Humphrey Hadſt thou beene his mother,
Thou couldſt haue better told:
Why let me ſee I thinkē thou canſt not ſee yet.
Poore man Yes truly maister, as cleere as day.
Humphrey Saileſt thou ſo! what colour's his cloake?
Poore man Why red maister, as red as bloud.
Humphrey And his cloake?
Poore man Why that's greene.
Humphrey And what colour's his hofe?
Poore man Yellow maister, yellow as gold.
Humphrey And what colours my gowne?
Poore man Blacke ſir, as blacke as reat.
King Then belike he knowes what colour reat is on.
Suffolke And I think reat did he neuer ſee.
Humph. But cloakes and gownes ere this day many a one:
But tell me ſirra, what's my name?
Poore man Alas maister I know not.
Humphrey What's his name?
Poore man I know not.
Humphrey Nor his?
poore. No truly ſir.
Hum. Nor his name?
poore. No indeed maister.
Hum. What's thine owne name?
poore. Sander, and it please you maister.
Hum. Then Sander ſithere, the lyingeſt knave in Chriſtendome.

stendomie. If thou hadst been borne blind, thou mightst aswell haue knowne all our names, as thus to name the feuerall colours we do weare. Sight may distinguish of colours, but so dainly to nominate them all it is impossible. My lords, saint Albons here hath done a miracle, and would you not thinke his cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs againe?

poore man Oh maister I would you could.

Humphrey My maisters of Saint Albons, Haue you not Beadles in your Towne,
And things called whips?

Mayor Yes my lord, if it please your grace.

Hum. Then send for one presently.

Mayor Sirra, go fetch the Beadle hither straight.

exit one.

Hum. Now fetch me a stoole hither by and by,
Now sirra, if you meane to save your selfe from whipping,
Leape me ouer this stoole, and runne away.

Enter Beadle.

poore. Alas master I am not able to stand alone,
You go about to torture me in vain.

Hum. Well sir, we must haue you find your legs,
Sirra Beadle, whip him til he leape ouer that same stoole.

Beadle I will my Lord, come on sirra, off with your doublet quickly.

poore. Alas master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

After the beadle hath hit him one girke, he leapes ouer the stoole and runs away, and they run after him, crying, a miracle, a miracle.

Hum. A miracle, a miracle, let him be taken againe, and whipt through euery market Towne till he comes at Barwicke where he was borne.

Major It shal be done my Lord.

exit Mayor.

Suff. My lord Protector hath done wonders to day,
He hath made the blind to see, and the halt to go.

Hum. Yea but you did greater wonders, when you made whole Dukedomes flic in a day.

The first part of the contention of the two famous Witnesse France.

King Haue done I say, and let me heare no more of that.

Enter the Duke of Buckingham.

What newes brings Duke Humphrey of Buckingham?

Buck. Ill newes for some my lord, and this it is,
That proud dame Elnor our Protectors wife,
Hath plotted Treasons gainst the King and Peeres,
By witchcrafts sorceries, and coniurings,
Who by such meanes did raise a spirit vp,
To tell her what hap should betide the state,
But ere they had finisht their diuellish drift,
By Yorke and my selfe they were all surprizde,
And heres the answer the diuell did make to them.

King First of the King, what shall become of him?

Reads The Duke yet liues, that Henry shall depose,
Yet him out liue, and die a violent death,
Gods wil be done in all:

What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolke?
By water shall he die and take his end.

Suff. By water must the duke of Suffolke die,
It must be so, or els the diuell doth lie.

King Let Somerset shun castles,
For safer shall he be vpon the sandy plaines,
Then where castles mounted stand.

Car. Heres good stufte: how now my lord protector?
This newes I thinke hath turnde your weapons point,
I am in doubt youle scarcely keepe your promise.

Humph. Forbeare ambitious prelate to vrge my griefe,
And pardon me my gracious soueraigne,
For here I sweare vnto your maiesty,
That I am guiltlesse of these hainous crimes,
Which my ambitious wife hath falsly done:
And for she would betray her soueraigne lord,
I here renounce her from my bed and boord,
And leauue her open for the law to iudge,
Unlesse she cleere her selfe of this foule deed.

King Come my lords this night weele lodge in S. Albons,
And

bones, of Yorke and Lancaster.

And to morrow we will ride to London,
And trie the vmost of these treasons forth,
Come vnkle Gloster along with vs,
My mind doth tell me thou art innocent.

Enter the Duke of Yorke, and the Earles of Salsbury and Warwicke.

Yorke My lords, our simple supper ended, thus
Let me reueale vnto your honors here,
The right and title of the house of Yorke,
To Englands Crowne by lineall descent.

War. Then Yorke begin, and if thy claime be good,
The Neuills are thy subiects to commaund.

Yorke Then thus my lords.
Edward the third had seuen sonnes,
The first was Edward the blacke Prince,
Prince of Wales.
The second was Edmund of Langley,
Duke of Yorke.
The third was Lyonell Duke of Clarence.
The fourth was Iohn of Gaunt,
The Duke of Lancaster.
The fifth was Roger Mortemer, Earle of March.
The sixt was sir Thomas of Woodstocke.
William of Winsore was the seventh and last.

Now Edward the black prince he died before his father, & left behinde him Richard, that afterwards was King, crowned by the name of Richard the second, and he died without an heire.
Edmund of Langly duke of Yorke died, and left behind him
two daughters, Anne and Elinor.

Lyonel duke of Clarence died, and left behind, Alice, Anne, and Elinor, that was after married to my father, and by her I claime the Crowne, as the true hevre to Lyonell Duke of Clarence the third sonne to Edward the third. Now sir. In the time of Richards raigne, Henry of Bullenbrooke, sonne
and

The first part of the conencion of the two famoues and heire to Iohn of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster, fourth son to Edward the third, he claide the crowne, depoide the mirth-ful King, and as you both know, in Pomphey Castle harmles Richard was shamefully murthered, and so by Richards death came the house of Lancaster vnto the Crowne.

Sall. Sauing your tale my lord, as I haue heard, in the raigne of Bullenbrook, the Duke of York did claime the Crown, and but for Owen Glendor, had bin King.

Yorke True, but so it fortuned then, by meanes of that monstrous rebell Glendor, the noble Duke of Yorke was done to death, and so euer since the heires of Iohn of Gaunt haue possessed the Crowne. But if the issue of the elder should succeed before the issue of the yonger, then am I lawfull heire vnto the kingdome.

War. What plaine proceedings can be more plaine? he claiimes it from Lyonel duke of Clarence, the third son to Edward the third, and Henry from Iohn of Gaunt the fourth son.
So that til Lyons issue failes, his should not raigne. It fails not yet, but flourisheth in thee and in thy sons, braue slips of such a stocke. Then noble father, kneele we both togither, and in this priuate place be we the first to honor him with birth-right to the Crowne.

Both: Long liue Richard Englands roiall King.

Yorke I thank you both: but lords, I am not your king, vntil this sword be sheathed eu'en in the heart bloud of the house of Lancaster.

War. Then Yorke aduise thy selfe, and take thy time,
Claiame thou the Crowne, and set thy standard vp,
And in the same aduance the milke-white Rose,
And then to guard it, I wil rouse the Beare,
Inuiron'd with ten thousand ragged-staves
To aide and help thee for to win thy right,
Maugre the proudest lords of Henryes bloud,
That dares deny the right and claime of Yorke,
For why, my mind presageth I shall liue
To see the noble Duke of Yorke to be a King.

Yorke. Thanks noble Warwick, and York doth hope to see The

bones, of Yorke and Lancaster.

The Earle of Warwicke hue, to be the greatest man in England, but the King. Come lets goe. exeunt omnes.

Enter King Henry, and the Queene, Duke Humphrey, the Duke of Suffolke, and the Duke of Buckingham, the Cardinal, and dame
Elnor Cobham, led with the Officers, and then enter to them the Duke of Yorke, and the Earles of Salbury and Warricke.

King Stand forth dame Elnor Cobham dutches of Gloster, & heare the sentence pronounced against thee for these treasons, that thou hast committed against vs, our States, and Peers.
First, for thy haynous crimes, thou shalt two daies in London do penance barefoot in the streetes, with a white sheete about thy bodie, & a wax taper burning in thy hand: that done, thou shalt be banished for euer into the Ile of Man, there to end thy wretched daies, and this is our sentence irrevocable. Away with her.

Elnor Euen to my death, for I haue liued too long.
exeunt some with Elnor.

King Grieue not noble vnckle, but be thou glad,
In that these treasons thus are come to light,
Lest God had pourde his vengeance on thy head,
For her offences that thou heldst so deare.

Humph. Oh gracious Henry, giue me leaue awhile,
To leaue your grace, and to depart away,
For sorrowes teares hath gripte my aged heart,
And makes the fountaines of mine eies to swell,
And therefore good my Lord let me depart.

King With all my heart good vnckle, when you please,
Yet ere thou goest, Humphrey resigne thy staffe,
For Henry will be no more protected,
The Lord shal be my guide, both for my land and me.

Humph. My staffe, yea noble Henry, my life and all,
As erst thy noble father made it mine,
And euен as willing at thy feet I leaue it,
As others would ambitiously receiue it,
And long hereafter when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne.

King Vnkle Gloster, stand vp and go in peace,

Queene Take vp the staffe, for here it ought to stand,
Where should it be but in King Henries hand?
Yorke Please it your maestie, this is the day
That was appointed for the combating,
Betweene the Armourer and his man, my Lord,
And they are ready when your grace doth please.
King Then call them forth, that they may try their rights.

Enter at one doore the Armourer and his neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunken, and he enters with a drum before him, and his staffe with a sand-bagge fastened to it: and at the other doore, his man with a drum and sand-bag, and Prentises drinking to him.

1 Neighbor Here neighbor Horner, I drink to you in a cup
And feare not neighbor, you shall do well enough. (of sack.
2 Neigh. And here neighbor, heres a cup of Charneco.
3 Neigh. Heres a pot of good double beere, neighbour

Armourer Let it come, yfaith Ille pledge you all,
And a fig for Peter.

1 Prentise Here Peter, I drinke to thee, and be not affard.
2 Pren. Here Peter, heres a pint of Claret wine for thee.
3 Pren. And heres a quart for me, and be mery Peter,
And feare not thy maister, fight for credit of the prentises.

Peter I thanke you all, but Ille drinke no more,
Here Robin, and if I die, here I give thee my hammer,
And Will, thou shalt haue my aperne, and here Tom,
Take all my mony that I haue.

O Lord blesse me, I pray God, for I am never able to deale with my master, he hath leard so much fence already.

Salf. Come leaue your drinking, and fall to blowes:
Sirra, what's thy name?

Peter Peter forlooth.

Salf. Peter, what more?

Peter. Thump.

Salf.

Salsb. Thunap, then see that thou thump thy master.

Arm. Here to thee neighbor, fill al the pots againe, for before we fight, look you, I will tell you my mind, for I am come hither, as it were of mans instigation, to proue my selfe an honest man, & Peter a knaue, & so haue at you Peter, with down right blowes, as Beuis of Southampton fell vpon Askapart.

Peter Law you now, I told you hees in his fence already.

Alarime: and Peter hits him on the head and fels him

Arm. Hold Peter, I confesse, treason, treason. he dies,

Peter O God I giue thee praise. he kneeleth downe.

Pren. Ho well done Peter: God saue the King.

King Go take hence that triator from our sight,
For by his death we do perceiue his guilt,
And God in iustice hath reveald to vs,
The truth and innocence of this poore fellow,
Which he had thought to haue murthered wrongfully:
Come fellow follow vs for thy reward. exeunt omnes,

Enter Duke Humphrey and his men, in mourning cloakes.

Humph. Sirra, what's a clocke?

Seruing. Almost ten my Lord.

Humph. Then is that wofull houre hard at hand,
That my poore lady should come by this way,
In shamefull penance wandering in the streetes,
Sweete Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrooke,
The abiect people gazing on thy face,
With emious lookes laughing at thy shame,
That earst did follow thy proud Chariot wheeles,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streetes.

Enter Dame Elnor Cobham barefoote, and a white sheete about her, with a waxe candle in her hand, and verses writen on her back and pind on, and accompanied with the Shiriffes of London, and sir John Standly, and officers, with billes and bolbards.

Seruing. My gracious Lord, see where my lady comes,
Please it your grace, weele take her from the Shiriffes?

*The first part of the contention of the two famous Humph. I charge you for your liues stir not a foote,
Nor offer once to draw a weapon here,
But let them do their office as they shoulde.*

*Elnor Come you my Lord to see my open shaine:
Ah Gloster, now thou doest penance too,
See how the giddie people looke at thee,
Shaking their heads, and pointing at thee here,
Go get thee gone, and hide thee from their sights,
And in thy pent vp studie rue my shame,
And ban thine enemies: Ah mine and thine.*

*Hum. Ah Nell, sweet Nell, forget this extreame griefe,
And beare it patiently to ease thy heart.*

*Elnor Ah Gloster, teach me to forget my selfe,
For whilst I thinke I am thy wedded wife,
Then thought of this, doth kill my woful heart,
The ruthlesse flints do cut my tender feete,
And when I start, the cruell people laugh,
And bids me be aduised how I tread,
And thus with burning Tapor in my hand,
Malde vp in shame with papers on my backe,
Ah Gloster, can I endure this and liue?
Sometime Ile say I am Duke Humphreys wife,
And he a Prince, Protector of the land,
But so he rulde, and such a Prince he was,
As he stood by, whilst I his forlorne Dutches,
Was led with shame, and made a laughing stocke,
To every idle rascall follower.*

*Hum. My louely Nell, what wouldst thou haue me do?
Should I attempt to rescue thee from hence,
I should incurre the danger of the law,
And thy disgrace would not be shadowed so.*

*Elnor Be thou milde, and stir not at my disgrace,
Vntill the axe of death hang ouer thy head,
As shortly sure it will: For Suffolke he,
The new made Duke, that may do al in all
With her that loues him so, and hates vs all,
And iunpious Yorke and Bewford that false priest.*

Enter a Herald of Armes.

Herald. I summon your grace, vnto his highnes Parliament holden at saint Edmunds bury, the first of the next month.

Humph. A Parliament and our consent neuer graude Therein before. This is sodeine.

Well, we will be there.

exit Herald.

Maister Shiriffe, I pray proceede no further against my lady, then the course of law extends.

Shiriffe Please it your grace, my office here doth end,
And I must deliuere her to sir John Standly,
To be conducted into the Ile of Man.

Humph. Must you sir John conduct my lady?

Standly Yea my gracious lord, for so it is decreede,
And I am so commaunded by the King.

Humph. I pray you sir John, vse her nere the worse,
In that I intreat you to vse her well,
The world may smile againe, and I may liue,
To do you fauor if you do it her,
And so sir John farewell.

Elnor What? gone my lord, and bid not me farewell?

Hum. Witnesse my bleeding heart, I cannot stay to speake.

exit Humphrey and his men.

Elnor Then is he gone, is noble G'oster gone,
And doth duke Humphrey now forsake me too?
Then let me haste from out faire Englands boundes,
Come Standley, come, and let vs haste away.

Standly Madame, lets go vnto some house hereby,
Where you may shift your selfe before we goe.

Elnor Ah good sir John, my shame cannot be hid,
Nor put away, with casting off my sheete:
But come, let vs go, master Shiriffe farewell,
Thou hast but done thy office as thou shouldest. exceunt omnes

Enter to the Parliament.

The first part of the contention of the two famous
Duke of Suffolke, and then the Duke of Yorke, and the Cardia-nall of Winchester, and then the King and Queene, and then the Earle of Salsbury, and the Earle of Warricke.

King I wonder our vnckle Gloster staies so long.

Queene Can you not see, or will you not perceiue,
How that ambitious duke doth vse himselfe?
The time hath beene, but now that time is past,
That none so humble as Duke Humphrey was:
But now let one meeke him eu'en in the morne,
When every one will giue the time of day,
And he will neither moue nor speake to vs,
See you not the Commons follow him
In troupes, crying, God sauе the good Duke Humphrey,
And with long life Iesus preserue his grace,
Honoring him as if he were a King:
Gloster is no little man in England,
And if he list to stir commotions,
Tis likely that the people will follow him:
My lord, if you imagine, there is no such thing.
Then let it passe, and call it a womans feare,
My lord of Suffolke, Buckingham, and Yorke,
Disproue my allegations if you can,
And by your speeches, if you can reprove me,
I will subscribe and say, I wrong de the Duke.

Suffolke Well hath your grace foreseeene into that Duke,
And if I had beene licent to speake,
I thinke I should haue told your graces tale,
Smooth runs the brooke whereas the stremme is deepest,
No, no my soueraigne, Gloster is a man
Unsounded yet, and full of deepe deceit.

Enter the Duke of Somerset.

King Welcome Lord Somerset, what newes from France?

Somer Cold newes my lerd, and this it is,
That all your holds and Townes within those Territories,
Is ouercome my Lord, and all is lost.

King Cold newes indeede Lord Somerset,
But Gods will be done.

Yorke

bounses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Yorke Cold newes for me, for I had hope of France,
Euen as I haue of fertill England.

Enter Duke Humphrey.

Humph. Pardon my liege, that I haue staid so long.

Suffolke Nay Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon,
Vnlesse thou proue more loyall then thou art,
We do arrest thee on high treason here.

Humph. Why Suffolkes duke thou shalt not see me blush
Nor change my countenance for thine arrest,
Whereof am I guiltie, who are my accusers?

York. Tis thought my lord, your grace tooke bribes from
And stopt the souldiers of their pay. (France,
By which his maestie hath lost all France.

Humph. Is it but thought so, and who are they that think so?
So God help me, as I haue watcht the night,
Euer intending good for England still,
That pennie that euer I tooke from France,
Be brought against me at the judgement day,
I neuer robd the souldiers of their pay,
Many a pound of mine owne proper cost
Haue I sent ouer for the souldiers wants,
Because I would not racke the needie Commons.

Car. In your Protectorship you did devise,
Strange tormentors for offendours, by which meanes
England hath beene defamde by tyrannie.

Hum. Why tis well knowne that whilst I was protector, Pittie was all the fault that was in me:
A murtherer, or foule felonious theefe,
That robs and murthers seely passengers,
I torturd aboue the rate of common law.

Suffolke. Tush my lord, these be things of no account,
But greater matters are laid vnto your charge,
I do arrest thee on high treason here,
And commit thee to my good Lord Cardinall,
Vntill such time as thou canst cleare thy selfe.

King Good vnkle obey to his arrest,
I haue no doubt but thou shalt cleare thy selfe,

My

*The first part of the contention of the two famous

Humph. Ah gracious Henry these daies are dangerous,
And would my death might end these miseries,
And stay their moodes for good King Henries sake,
But I am made the Prologue to their play,
And thousands more must follow after me,
That dreads not yet their liues destruction,
Suffolkes hatefull tongue blabs his hearts malice,
Bewfords firie eies shewes his enuious mind,
Buckinghamis proud lookes bewraies his cruel thoughts,
And dogged Yorke that leuells at the Moone,
Whose ouerweening arme I haue held backe:
All you haue ioynd to betray me thus:
And you my gracious lady, and Soueraigne mistris,
Causelesse haue laid complaints vpon my head,
I shall not want false witnessses now,
That so amongst you, you may haue my life.
The prouerb no doubt will be well perforinde,
A staffe is quickly found to beate a dog.

Suffolke Doth he not twit our Soueraigne lady here,
As if that shee with ignominious wrong,
Had subornd or hyred some to sweare against his life?

Queene Yea but I can giue the loser leue to speake.

Humph. Far truer spoke then ment, I loose indeed,
Beshrew the winners hearts, they play me false.

Buck. Heele wrest the fenc, and keep vs here al day,
My Lord of Winchester, see him sent away.

Card. Who's within there? take in Duke Humphrey,
And see him garded sure within my house.

Humph. O! thus king Henry cast away his crouch,
Before his legs can beare his body vp,
And puts his watchfull Shepheard from his side,
Whilst wolues stand snarring who shal bite him first.
Farewel my soueraigne, long maist thou enjoy,
Thy fathers happie daies free from annoy.

Exe Humphrey, with the Cardinals men.

King My lords, what to your wisedomes shall seeme best,
Do

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Do and vndo, as if our selfe were here.

Queene What wil your highnesse leue the Parliament?

King Yea Margaret, my heart is killed with griefe,
Where I may sit and sigh in endlesse mone,
For who's a traitor? Gloster he is none.

exit King, Salsbury, and Warwicke.

Queene Then sit we downe againe my lord Cardinall, Suffolke, Buckingham, Yorke and Somerset,
Let vs consult of prowde duke Humphries fall,
In mine opinion it were good he dide,
For safetie of our King and common wealth.

Suffolke And so thinke I madame, for as you know,
If our King Henry had shooke hands with death,
Duke Humphrey then would looke to be our King,
And it may be, by policie he workes,
To bring to passe the thing which now we doubt,
The foxe barkes not when he would steale the lamb,
But if we take him ere he do the deede,
We should not question, if that he should liue,
No, let him die, in that he is a foxe,
Lest that in liuing he offend vs more.

Car. Then let him die before the Commons know,
For feare that they do rise in Armes for him.

Yorke Then do it sodainly my Lords.

Suff. Let that be my lord Cardinalls charge and mine.

Car. Agreed, for hee's already kept within my house.

Enter a Messenger.

Queene How now sirra, what newes?

Messen. Madame, I bring you newes from Ireland,
The wilde Onele my lord is vp in Armes,
With troupes of Irish Kernes that vncontrold,
Do plant theinselues within the English pale,
And burne and spoile the Country as they go.

Queen What redresse shall we haue for this my Lords?

Yorke T were very good, that my Lord of Somerset
That fortunate champion were sent ouer,
To keepe in awe the stubborne Irishmen,

E

He

*The first part of the contention of the two famoues
He did so much good when he was in France.*

Somer. Had Yorke beene there with all his far fetcht Pollicies he might haue lost as much as I.

Yorke Yea, for Yorke would haue lost his life, before
That shoulde haue revolte from Englands rule. (then I.

Somer. Yea, so thou might st, and yet haue gouernd worse

Yorke What worse then nought, then a shame take all.

Somer. Shame on thy selfe, that wisheth shame.

Queene Somerset forbear, good Yorke be patient,
And do thou take in hand to crosse the seas,
With troupes of armed men to quell the pride,
Of those ambitious Irish that rebell.

Yorke. Well Madame, sith your grace is so content,
Let me haue some bands of chosen souldiers,
And Yorke shall trix his fortune gainst those Kernes.

Queene Yorke thou shalt, my lord of Buckingham,
Let it be your charge to muster vp such souldiers,
As shall suffice him in these needfull warres.

Buck. Madame I wil, and leue such a band
As soone shal ouercome those Irish rebels:
But Yorke, where shal those souldiers stay for thee?

Yorke At Bristow, I will expect them ten daies hence.

Buck. Then thither shall they come, and so farewell.

exit Buckingham.

Yorke Adiew my Lord of Buckingham.

Queene Suffolke remember what you haue to do,
And you Lord Cardinal concerning Duke Humphrey.
Twere good that you did see to it in time.
Come let vs go, that it may be performde.

exiunt omnes, manet Yorke.

Yorke Now Yorke bethinke thy selfe and rouse thee vp,
Take tyme whilst it is offered thee so faire,
Lest when thou wouldest, thou canst not it attaine,
I was men I lackt, and now they giue them me,
And now whilst I am busie in Ireland,
I haue seducde a head strong Kentish man,
John Cade of Ashford,

Vndeſſ

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Vnder the title of sir John Mortimer,
To raise commotion, and by that meanes,
I shall perceiue how the common people,
Do affect the claime and house of Yorke,
Then if he haue successe in his affaires,
From Ireland then comes Yorke againe,
To reape the haruest which that coystril sowed,
Now if he should be taken and condemnd,
Heele nere confesse that I did set him on,
And therefore ere I go, ile send him word,
To put in practise and to gather head,
That so soone as I am gone, he may begin
To rise in Arnes with troupes of country swaines:
To help him to performe this enterprize,
And then Duke Humprhey, he well made away,
None then can stop the light to Englands crowne,
But York can tame and headlong pul them down. exit York.

Then the curtaines being drawne, Duke Humphrey is discovered in his bed, and two men lying on his breſt and smothering him in his bed: and then enter the Duke of Suffolke to them.

Suff. How now firs, what haue you dispatcht him?

One. Yea my Lord, he is dead I warrant you.

Suff. Then see the clothes laid smooth about him stil,
That when the King comes, he may perceiue
No other, but that he dide of his owne accord.

2 All things is hansom now my Lord.

Suff. Then draw the curtaines againe, and get you gone,
And you shal haue your firm reward anon. excunt murderers.

Then enter the King and Queene, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Duke of Somerset, and the Cardinall.

King My lord of Suffolke go call our vnkle Gloster,
Tell him, this day we will that he do cleare himselfe.

Suff. I will my Lord.

exit Suffolke.

King And good my lords, proceed no further against our vn-
Then by iust proofe you can affirme, (kic Gloster,

The first part of the contention of the two famoys
For as the sucking child or harinlesse lamb,
So is he innocent of treason to our state.

Enter Suffolke.

How now Suffolke, where's our vnckle?

Suff. Dead in his bed, my Lord, Gloster is dead.

The King falls in a swoone.

Queene Ay me, the King is dead: help, help, my lords.

Suff. Comfort my Lord, gracious Henry, comfort.

King What doth my Lord of Suffolke bid me comfort?

Came he euен now to sing a Rauens note,
And thinkes he that the cherping of a Wren,
By crying comfort through a hollow voice,
Can satisfie my grieves, or ease my heart?
Thou balefull messenger, out of my sight,
For euен in thy eie-balls murther sits,
Yet do not go: come Basaliske
And kill the seely gazer with thy lookes.

Queene Why do you rate my lord of Suffolke thus,
As if that he had causde Duke Humphreys death?
The Duke and I too, you know were enemies,
And you had best say that I did murther him.

King Ah woe is me, for wretched Glosters death.

Queene Bewee for me, more wretched then he was,
What dost thou turne away and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leaper, looke on me,
Was I for this nie wrackt vpon the sea?
And thrice by aukward winds driven backe from Englands.
What might it bode but that well foretelling (bounds,
Winds said, seeke not a scorpions neast.

Enter the Earles of Warwicke and Calsbury.

War. My lord, the Commons like an angry huic of bees,
Run vp and downe, caring not whom they sting,
For good Humphreys death, whom they report
To be murthered by Suffolke and the Cardinal here.

King That he is dead (good Warwicke) is too true,
But how he died, God knowes, not Henry.

War. Enter his priuy chamber any lord, and view the body.

Good

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Good father stay you with the rude multitude til I retorne.

Salsb. I will sonne.

exit Salsbury.

Warwicke drawes the curtaines and shewes Duke

Humphrey in his bed.

King Ah vnckle Gloster, heauen receive thy soule,
Farewell poore Henries ioy, now thou art gone.

War. Now by his soule, that tooke our shape vpon him
To free vs from his fathers dreadful curse,
I am resolu d that violent hands were laid,
Vpon the life of this famous Duke.

Suff. A dreadfull oath sworne with a solemne tongue,
What instance giues Lord Warwicke for these wordes?

War. Oft haue I seene a timely parted ghost,
Of ashie semblance, pale and bloudlesse:
But loe, the bloud is settled in the face,
More better coloured, then when he liude,
His well proportioned beard made rough and sterne,
His fingers spread abroad as one that graspt for life,
Yet was by strength surprisde, the least of these are probable,
It cannot chuse but he was murthered.

Queene Suffolke and the Cardinall had him in charge.
And they I trust sir, are no murtherers.

War. Yea, but twas well knowne they were not his friends,
And tis well seene he found some enemies.

Card. But haue you no greater proofes then these?

War. Who sees a heifer dead and bleeding fresh,
And sees hard by a butcher with an axe,
But wil suspect twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the partrige in the puitockes neast,
But will imagine how the bird came there,
Although the Kite soare with vnbloudy beake?
Euen so suspitious is this Tragedie.

Queene Are you the Kite Bewford, where's your talants?
Is Suffolke the butcher, where's his Knife?

Suff. I weare no Knife to slaughter sleeping men,
But heres a vengefull sword rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart,

*The first part of the contention of the two famous
That slanders me with murthers crimson badge,
Say if thou darc proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am guilty in Duke Humphreys death.*

exit Cardinall.

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queene He dares not calme his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant controwler,
Though Suffolke dare him twentie hundred times.

War. Madame be ye still, with reuerence may I say it,
That euery word you speake in his defence,
Is flaunger to your royll maestie.

Suff. Blunt witted lord, ignoble in thy words,
If euer Lady wrongd her lord so much,
Thy mother tooke vnto her blamefull bed,
Some sterne vntutred churle, and noble stocke,
Was graft with crab-tree slip, whose fruite thou art,
And neuert of the Neuils noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murther bucklers thee,
And I should rob the deaths man of his fee,
Quiting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my soueraignes presence makes me mute,
I would false murtherous coward on thy knees,
Make thee craue pardon for thy passed speech,
And say it was thy mother that thou meantist,
That thou thy selfe wast borne in bastardy,
And after all this fearefull homage done,
Giue thee thy hyre, and send thy soule to hell,
Pernicious bloud-sucker of sleeping men.

Suff. Thou shouldest be waking whilst I shead thy bloud, Iffrom this presence thou dare go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence.

Warwicke pulls him out.

Exit Warwicke and Suffolke, and then all the Commons within, cries, downe with Suffolke, downe with Suffolke.

And then enter againe the duke of Suffolke and Warwick, with their weapons drawne.

King Why how now lords?

Suff.

bounses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Suff. The traitorous Warwicke with the men of Berry,
Set al vpon me, mightie soueraigne.

The commons againe cries downe with Suffolke, downe with Suffolke. And enter from them the Earle of Sa-lsbury.

Salsb. My Lord, the Commons sends you word by me,
That vnlesse false Suffolk here be done to death,
Or banished faire Englands territories,
That they will erre from your highnesse person,
They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died,
They say, by him they feare the ruine of the Realme:
And therefore, if you loue your subiects weale,
They wish you to banish him from forth the land.

Suff. Indeed tis like the Commons rude vnpolish't hinds,
Would send such message to their soueraigne,
But you my lord were glad to be employd.
To trie how quaint an Orater you were,
But all the honor Salsbury hath got,
Is, that he was the Lord Embassadour,
Sent from a sort of tinkars to the King.

*The Commons cries, an answere from the King,
my Lord of Salsbury.*

King Good Salsbury go backe againe to them,
Tell them we thanke them for all their louing care,
And had not I beene cited thus by their meanes,
My selfe had done it: therefore here I sweare,
If Suffolke be found to breathe in any place,
Where I haue rule, but three daies more, he dies.

exit Salsbury.

Queene. Oh Henry, reuerse the doome of gentle Suffolkes banishment.

King Vngentle Queene, to cal him gentle Suffolke, Speake not for him, for in England he shall not rest,
If I say, I may relent, but if I sweare it is irreuocable:
Come Warwicke, and go thou in with me,
For I haue great matters to impart to thee.

exit King and Warwicke, manet Queene and Suffolke.

Queene

The first part of the contention of the two famous

*Queene Hell fire and vengeance go along with you;
Theres two of you, the duell make the third,
Fie womanish man, canst thou not curse thy enemies?*

*Suff. A plague vpon them: wherefore should I curse them?
Could curses kill as do the Mandrakes groanes,
I would invent as many bitter termes,
Deliuered strongly through my fixed teeth,
With twice so many signes of deadly hate,
As leane facde Enuy in her loathsome caue,
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words,
Mine eies should sparkle like the beaten flint,
My haire be fixt on end, as one distraught,
And euery ioynt should seeme to curse and ban,
And now me thinkes my burthened heart would break.
Should I not curse them: poison be their drinke,
Gall, worse then gall, the daintiest thing they taste,
Their sweetest shade, a groue of sypris trees,
Their softest touch, as smart as lizards stings,
Their musique frightfull, like the serpents hisse.
And boding srike-owles make the consort full,
All the foule terrors in darkē seated hell.*

Queene. Enough sweete Suffolke, thou tormentist thy self.

*Suffolke. You bade me ban, and will you bid me cease?
Now by this ground that I am banisht from,
Well could I curse away a winters night,
And standing naked on a mountaine top,
Where biting cold would never let grasse grow,
And thinke it but a minute spent in sport.*

*Queene. No more, sweete Suffolke, hie thee hence to France,
Or hie where thou wilt within this worldes globe,
Ile haue an Irish that shall find thee out,
And long thou shalt not stay, but ile haue thee repeald,
Or venture to be banished my selfe,
Oh let this kisse be printed in thy hand,
That when thou seeest it, thou maist thinke on me:
Away, I say, that I may feele my griefe,
For it is nothing whilste thou standest here.*

Suff.

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Suff. Thus is poore Suffolke ten times banished,
Once by the King, but three times thrice by thee.

Enter Vawse.

Queene How now, whither goes Vawse so fast?

Vawse. To signifie vnto his maiesty,
That Cardinall Bewford is at point of death,
Somtimes he raves and cries as he were mad,
Somtimes he calls vpon Duke Humphreys ghost,
And whispers to his pillow as to him,
And sometime he calls to speake vnto the King,
And I am going to certifie vnto his grace,
That euuen now he cald alowd for him.

Queene Go then good Vawse, and certifie the King.

exit Vawse.

Oh what is worldly pompe! all men must die.
And woe am I for Bewfords heauy end,
But why mourne I for him, whilst thou art here?
Sweete Suffolke hie thee hence to France,
For if the King do come, thou sure must die.

Suff. And if I go, I cannot liue: but here to die,
VVhat were it else, but like a pleasant slumber
In thy lap? Here could I, could I, breceth my soule into the ayre,
As milde and gentle as the new borne babe,
That dies with mothers dug between his lips,
VVhere from thy sight I should be raging mad,
And call for thee to close mine eies,
Or with thy lips to stop my dying soule,
That I might breath it so into thy body,
And then it liude in sweete Elyziam,
By thee to die, were but to die in ieast,
From thee to die, were torment more then death,
O let me stay, befall what may befall.

Queene Oh mightst thou stay with safetie of thy life,
Then shouldest thou stay, but heauens deny it,
And therefore go, but hope ere long to be repeald.

Suff. I goe.

F

Queene

The first part of the contention of the two famous

Queene And take my heart with thee.

She kisseth him.

Suff. A iewell lockt into the wofulst caske,
That euer yet containd a thing of worth,
Thus like a splitted barke so sunder we
This way fall I to death.

Queene This way for me.

exit Suff. Lee.

exit Queene.

Enter King and Salsbury, and then the curtaines be drawne, and the Cardinall is discouered in his bed, rauing and staring as if he were mad.

Car. O death, if thou wilt let me liue but one whole yeare,
Ile giue thee as much gold as wil purchase such another lland.

King Oh see my lord of Salsbury how he is troubled,
Lord Cardinall, remember Christ must haue thy soule.

Car. Why died he not in his bed?
What would you haue me to do then?
Can I make men liue whether they will or no?
Sirra, go fetch me the strong poison which the Pothicary sent
Oh see where Duke Humphreys ghost doth stand,
And stares me in the face: looke, look, couabe down his haire,
So now hees gone againe: Oh, oh, oh.

Selv. See how the pangs of death doth gripe his heart,

King Lord Cardinall, if thou dieſt assured of heauenly blisse,
Hold vp thy hand, and make some ſigne to vs.

The Cardinall dies.

Oh fee, he dies, and makes no ſigne at all,

Oh God forgiue his soule.

Sals. So bad an end did neuer none behold,
But as his death, so was his life in all.

King Forbeare to iudge, good Salsbury forbeare,

For God will iudge vs all:

Go take him hence, and ſee his funeralls be performde.

exit King, Salsbury, and the others.

Alarmes mihiſt, and the chambers be discharged, like as it were a fight at ſea. And then enter the capaine of the ſhippe and the Maſter, and the Maſters mate, and the duke of Suf-

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

folke disguised, and others with him, and Walter Whickmore.

Cap. Bring forward these prisoners that scornd to yeeld, Unlade their goods with speed, and hooke their ship,
Here master, this prisoner I giue to you:
This other, the Masters Mate shall haue,
And Walter Whickmore, thou shalt haue this man,
And let them pay their ransomes ere they passe.

Suff. Walter! he starteth.

Walter How now, what doest thou feare me?
Thou shal haue better cause anon.

Suff. It is thy name affrights me, not thy selfe:
I do remember well, a cunning wilard told me,
That by Walter I should die:
Yet let not that make thee bloudie minded,
Thy name being rightly sounded,
Is Gualter, not Walter.

Walter Gualter or Walter, all's on to me,
I am the man must bring thee to thy death.

Suff. I am a Gentleman looke on my Ring,
Ransome me at what thou wilt, it shall be paid.

Walter I lost mine eyc in boording of the ship,
And therefore ere I marchant-like sell bloud for gold,
Then cast me headlong downe into the sea.

2 Prio. But what shall our ransomes be?

Master A hundred pounds a peece, either pay that, or die.

2 Prio. Then saue our liues, it shall be paid.

Walter Come sirra, thy life shall be the ransome
I wil haue.

Suff. Stay villaine, thy prisoner is a prince,
The Duke of Suffolke, William de la Poole.

Cap. The Duke of Suffolke folded vp in rags?

Suf. Yea sir, but these rags are no part of the duke,
Ioue sometime went disguised, and why not I?

Cap. Yea but Ioue was neuer slaine as thou shalt be.

Suff. Base lady groome, King Henries bloud,
The honorable bloud of Lancaster,

The first part of the contention of the two famoues

Cannot be shead by such a lowly swaine,
I am sent Ambassador for the Queene to France,
I charge thee waffe me crosse the channell safe.

Cap. Ile waffe thee to thy death, go Walter take him hence,
And on our long boates side, chop off his head.

Suff. Thou darste not for thine owne.

Cap. Yes Poole.

Suff. Poole?

Cap. Yea, Poole, puddle, kennell, sincke and durt,
Ile stop that yawning mouth of thine,
Those lips of thine that so oft haue kist the Queene,
Shall sweep the ground, and thou that
Smildst at good duke Humphreys death,
Shalt liue no longer to infect the earth.

Suff. This villain being but Captain of a Pinnais,
Threatens more plagues then mighty Abradas,
The great Macedonian Pyrate,
Thy words addes fury and not remorse in me.

Cap. Yea but my deedes shall stay thy fury soon.

Suff. Hast not thou waited at my trencher,
When we haue feasted with Queene Margaret?
Hast not thou kist thine hand and held my stirrups?
And barehead plodded by my footcloth Mule,
And thought thee happy when I smild on thee?
This hand hath writ in thy defence,
Then shall I charme thee, hold thy lauish tongue.

Cap. Away with him VValter, I say, and off with his head.

I Pri'. Good my lord, intreat him mildly for your life.

Suff. First let this neck stoope to the axes edge,
Before this knee do bow to any,
Saue to the God of heauen, and to my King,
Suffolkes imperiall tongue cannot pleade
To such a iady groome.

Walter. Come, come, why do we let him speake?
I long to hauchis head, for ransome of mine cie.

Suff. A sworder and bande to slauie, Murthered sweete Tully:

bouses of Yorke and Lancaster.

Bratus bastard-hand stabde Julius Caesar,
And Suffolke dies by Pyrates on the seas.
exit Suffolke and Walter.

Cap. Off with his head, and send it to the Queene,
And ransomelesse this prisoner shall go free,
To see it safe deliuered vnto her:
Come lets go.

Enter two of the Rebels with long staines.

George. Come away Nick, and put a long staffe in thy pike, and prouide thy selfe, for I can tell thee, they haue bin vp this two daies.

Nicke. Then they had more need to go to bed now,
But serra George, whats the matter?

George. Why serra, Jack Cade the Diar of Ashford here,
He meanes to turne this land, and set a new map on it.

Nicke. Yea mary he had need so, for tis growne threedbare, Twas never mery world with vs, since these gentlemē came vp

George. I warrant thee, thou shalt never see a lord weare a leather aperne, now adaiers.

Nicke. But serra, who comes more beside Jacke Cade?

George. Why theres Dick the Butcher, & Robin the Sadler, and Wil that came a wooing to our Nan last sunday, & Harry and Tom, & Gregory that should haue your Parnil, & a great sort more is come from Rochester, & from Maidstone, & Can terbury, & al the townes here abouts, and we must al be lords or squires, assoone as Jacke Cade is King.

Nicke. Harke, harke, I heare the Drum, they be comming.

Enter Jacke Cade, Dicke Butcher, Robin, Will, Tom,

Harry and the rest with long staines.

Cade. Proclaine silence.

All. Silence.

Cade. I John Cade so named for my valiancie.

Dicke. Or rather for stealing of a Cade of sprats.

Cade. My father was a Morumer.

Nicke. He was an honest man, and a good Brick-laiier.

Cade. My mother came of the Brasfes.

Wil. She was a Pedlers daughter indeed, and sold many laces.

The first part of the contention of the two famous

Robin And now being not able to occupy her furd packe,
She washeth buckes vp and downe the countrey.

Cade Therefore I am honorable borne.

Harry Yea, for the field is honorable, for he was borne Vnder a hedge, for his father had no house but the Cage.

Cade I am able to endure much.

George Thats true, I know he can endure any thing,
For I haue seene him whipt two market daies togither.

Cade I feare neither sword nor fire.

Wil. He need not feare the sword, for his coate is of proofe.

Dick But me thinkes he should feare the fire, being so often burnt in the bath, for stealing of sheepe.

Cade Therfore be braue, for your captain is braue; and vows reformation: you shal haue seuen half-peny loaues for a penny, and the three hoopt pot, shal haue ten hoops, and it shalbe felony to drinke sinal beere, and if I be the King, as King I wil be.

All. God save your maiestie.

Cade I thank you good people, you shal al eate & drink of my score, and go al in my liuery, and weel haue no writing, but the score and the tally, and there shall be no lawes, but such as comes from my mouth.

Dicke We shall haue sore laws then, for he was thrust into the mouth the other day.

George Yea and stinking law too, for his breath stinkes so,
that one cannot abide it.

Enter Will with the clarke of Chaitam.

Will Oh Captaine, a prye.

Cade VVhose that, VVill?

Wil. The Clarke of Chaitam, he can write and reade & cast account, I tooke him setting of boies copies, and he has a booke in his pocket with red letters.

Cade Sounes, hees a coniurer, bring him hither,
Now sir, whats your name?

Clarke Emanuell sir, and it shal please you.

Dicke It will go hard with you, I can tel you,
For they vse to write that o'th top of letters.

Cade And what do you vse to write your name?

Or

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Or do you as ancient forefathers haue done,
Use the score and the tally?

Clarke. Nay true sir, I praise God I haue bin so wel brought vp, that I can write mine owne name.

Cade Oh he has confess, go hang him with his penny inck-horne about his necke.

exit one with the clarke.

Enter Tom.

Tom. Captain: news, newes, sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are comming with the Kings power, & me to kil vs al.

Cade Let them come, hees but a Knight is he?

Tom No, no, hees but a Knight.

Cade VVhy then to equal him, ile make my selfe Knight
Kneele downe Iohn Mortimer,

Rise vp sir Iohn Mortimer.

Is there any more of them that be Knights?

Tom. Yea his brother.

He knights Dicke Butcher.

Cade Then kneele downe Dicke Butcher, Rise vp sir Dicke Butcher.

Now sound vp the drumme.

Enter sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother, with A drumme and souldiers.

Cade As for these silken coated slaues, I passe not a pinnes.
Tis to you good people that I speake.

Staff. VVhy country-men, what meane you thus in troupes,
To follow this rebellious traitor Cade?

VVhy his father was but a Brick-laiere.

Cade. VVel, Adam was a Gardner, what then?
But I come of the Mortimers.

Stafford. Yea, the Duke of Yorke hath taught you that.

Cade The Duke of Yorke, nay, I hearnt it my selfe.
For looke you, Roger Mortimer the Earle of March,
Married the Duke of Clarence daughter.

Staff. VVel, that's true, but what then?

Cade And by her he had two children at a birth.

Staff. Thats false.

Cade.

The first part of the contention of the two famous

Cade Yea, but I say, tis true.

All. Why then tis true.

Cade And one of them was stoln away by a beggarwoman,
And was my father, and I am his sonne,
Deny it and you can.

Nicke Nay looke you, I know twas true,
For his father built a chimney in my fathers house,
And the brickes are aliue at this day to testifie.

Cade But dost thou heare Stafford, tel the King, that for his fathers sake, in whose time boies plaide at spanne-counter with French crownes, I am content that he shall be King as long as he liues: mary alwaies prouided, Ile be Protector ouer hym.

Staff. O monstrous simplicitie!

Cade And tell him, weele haue the Lord Sayes head, & the duke of Somersets, for deliuering vp the dukedomes of Anjoyn and Mayne, and selling the towns in France, by which meanes England hath bin maimd euer since, and gone as it were with a crouch, but that the puissance held it vp. And besides, they can speake French, and therefore they are traitors.

Staff. As how I prethee?

Cade Why the French men are our enemies, be they not?
And then can he that speakes with the tongue of an enemy be a good subiect?

Answe me to that.

Staff. Well serra, wylt thou yeeld thy selfe vnto the Kings mercy, and he wyl pardon thee and these, their outrages and rebellious deedes?

Cade Nay, bid the King come to me and he will, and then ile pardon him, or otherwaise ile haue his crowne tel him, ere it be long.

Staff. Go Herald, proclaime in all the Kings townes,
That those that wil forsake the Rebel Cade,
Shall haue free pardon from his maiestie;

exit Stafford and his men.

Cade Come sirs, saint George for vs and Kent.

exeunt omnes.

Alarums to battaille, and sir Humphrey Stafford and his brether is slaine.

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

slaine. Then Iacke Cade againe, and the rest.

Cade Sir Dicke Butcher, thou hast fought to day most valiantly, and knockt them downe as if thou hadst bin in thy slaughter house, and thus I will reward thee: the Lent shall be as long again as it was: thou shalt haue licence to kil for four score and one a weeke: drum strike vp, for now weele march to London, for to morrow I meane to sit in the Kings seate at Westminster.

excuse omnes.

Enter the King reading of a Letter, and the Queene with the Duke of Suffolkes head, and the Lord Say, with others.

King Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother is slaine, And the rebels march amaine to London, Go backe to them, and tell them thus from me, Ile come and parly with their generall.

Reade. Yet stay, ile reade the letter once againe: Lord Say, Iacke Cade hath solemnly vowd to haue thy head.

Say. Yea, but I hope your highnesse shall haue his.

King How now Madam, still lamenting and mourning for Suffolks death, I feare my loue, if I had bin dead, thou wouldst not haue mournd so much for me.

Queene No my loue, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a messenger.

Messen. Oh flic my Lord, the rebels are entered Southwarke, and haue almost wonne the bridge, Calling your grace an vsurper, And that monstrous rebel Cade, hath sworne To crowne himselfe King in Westminster, Therefore flic my Lord, and poste to Killingworth.

King Go bid Buckingham and Clifford gather An Army vp, and meeete with the rebels: Come Madam let vs hafte to Killingworth, Come on Lord Say, go thou along with vs, For feare the rebell Cade do find thee out.

Say. My innocence my Lord shall pleade for me: And therefore with your highnes leauue, Ile stay behynd.

King Euen as thou wilt my Lord Say:

G

Come

The first part of the contention of the two famours
Come Madame, let vs goe. exeunt omnes.

Enter the Lord Scayles upon the Tower walls walking.

Enter three or fourre citizens below.

L.Scayles How now, is Iacke Cade slaine?

1 Citizen No my Lord, not likely to be slaine,
For they haue wonne the bridge,
Killing all those that withstand them,
The Lord Major craueth aid of your honor from the Tower,
To defend the cittie from the rebells.

L.Scayles Such aide as I can spare, you shall command,
But I am troubled here with them my selfe,
The Rebels haue attempted to win the Tower,
But get you to Smithfield and gather head,
And thither I will send you Mathew Goffe:
Fight for your King, your country, and your liues,
And so farewell, for I must hence againe.

exeunt omnes.

Enter Iacke Cade and the rest, and strikes his sword upon London stone.

Cade Now is Mortimer Lord of this cittie,
And now sitting vpon London stone, we cominaund,
That the first yeare of our raigne,
The pissing conduit run nothing but red wine,
And now henceforth, it shall be treason
For any that calls me otherwise then

Lord Mortimer.

Enter a soldicer.

sould. Iacke Cade, Iacke Cade.

Cade Zounes, knocke him downe.

they kill him.

Dicke My Lord, theres an Army gathered togither
Into Smithfield.

Cade Come then, lets go figh t with them,
But first go on and set London bridge on fire:
And if you can, burne downe the Tower too,
Come lets away.

exeunt omnes.

Alarmes, and then Mathew Goffe is slain, and al the rest with him:
then enter Iacke Cade again, and his company.

Cade.

houſes, of Torke and Lancaster.

Cade So ſirs, now go ſome and pull downe the Sauoy, Others to the Innes of the court, downe with them all.

Dicke I haue a ſute vnto your Lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship Dicke, and thou ſhalt haue it
For that word.

Dick. That we may go burne all the Records,
And that all writing may be put downe,
And nothing vſde but the ſcore and the tally.

Cade Dick it ſhall be ſo, and henceforward al thing ſhalbe in commonon, and in Cheapside ſhall my palphrey go to graffe.
Why iſt not a miserable thing, that of the ſkin of an iuſcent lamb, ſhould parchment be made, and then with a little blotting ouer with inke, a man ſhould vndo himſelfe?

Some ſaies tis the bees that ſting, but I ſay, tis their wax, for I am ſure I never ſeald to any thing but once, and I was neuer mine owne man ſince.

Nicke. But when ſhall we take vp thofe commodities
Which you told vs of?

Cade Mary he that wil luſtily ſtand to it,
Shall go with me, and take vp thofe commodities following:
Item, a gowne, a kirtle, a peticote and a ſmocke.

Enter George.

George My Lord, a prize, a prize, heres the Lord Say,
Which ſold the townes in France.

Cade. Come hither thou Say, thou George, thou buckrum
What anſwer canſt thou make vnto my mightines, (Lord,
For deliuering vp the townes in France to Monsier busſe mine cue the Dolphin of France?

And more the ſo, thou haſt moſt traiterouſly erected a grammerschool, to infect the youth of the realm, & againſt the kings Crownē and dignitie, thou haſt builte vp a paper-mil, nay it wil be ſaid to thy face, that thou keepeſt men in thy house that daily reades of bookeſ with red letters, and talkes of a Nowne and a Verb, and ſuch abominable words, as no christian care is able to indure it: and beſides al that, thou haſt appointed certain iuſices of peace in euery ſhire to hang honest men that ſteal for their liuing, and because they could not reade, thou haſt hung them

The first part of the contention of the two famous them vp:only for which cause they were most worthy to live:
thou ridest on a footcloth,dost thou not?

Say. Yes, what of that?

Cade Mary I say thou oughtest not to let thy horse weare a cloake, when an honest man then thy selfe goes in his hose and dublet.

Say. You men of Kent.

All Kent, what of Kent?

Say Nothing but terra bona.

Cade Bonum terum,sounds whats that?

Dick He speakes French.

Will. No,tis Dutch.

Nick No,tis Outtalian,I know it well inough.

Say. Kent,in the Commentaries Cæsar wrote,
Terind it the ciuil st place of al this land,
Then noble country-men, heare me but speake,
I sold not France,I lost not Normandie.

Cade But wherefore doest thou shake thy head so?

Say It is the palse, and not feare that makes me.

Cade Nay thou nodst thy head,as who say, thou wilt be even with me,if thou getst away, but ile make thee sure enough, now
I haue thee: go take him to the standard in Cheapside & chop off his head,& then go to Milend-green,to sir James Cromer his son in law, and cut off his head too, and bring them to me vpon two poles presently. Away with him.

exit one or two with the Lord Say.

There shall not a nobleman weare a head on his shoulders,
But he shall pay me tribute for it:
Nor there shal not a maid be maried, but he shal fee to me for Maiden head or else, ile haue it my selfe, (her:
Mary I will that maried men shal hold of me in capite,
And that their wiues shal be as free as hart can think, or tongue

Enter Robin.

(can tell.

Robin O captaine! London bridge is a fire.

Cade Runne to Billingsgate, and fetch pitch and flaxe and squenchit.

Enter Dicke and a sergeant.

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Ser. Justice, justice, I pray you sir, let me haue justice of this fellow here.

Cade Why, what has he done?

Ser. Alas sir, he has rauisht my wife.

Dick Why my lord, he woud haue rested me,
And I went and entred my Action in his wiues paper house.

Cade Dicke follow thy sute in her common place,
You horson villaine, you are a sergeant, youle
Take any man by the throte for twelue pence,
And rest a man when hees at dinner,
And haue him to prison ere the meate be out of his mouth:
Go Dicke, take him hence, cut out his tong for cogging,
Hough him for running, and to conclude,
Braue him with his owne mace.

exit with the sergeant.

Enter two with the Lord Saies head, and sir James Cromers, upon two poles.

So, come cary them before me, and at euery lanes end, let them kisse together.

Enter the duke of Buckingham, and Lord Clifford, the Earle of Cumberland.

Cliff. Why country men and warlike frends of Kent,
What meanes this mutinous rebellion,
That you in troupes do muster thus your felues,
Vnder the conduct of this traitor Cade?
To rise against your soueraigne lord and King,
Who mildly hath his pardon sent to you,
If you forsake this monstrous rebell here?
If honour be the marke whereat you ayme,
Then haste to France, that our forefathers wonne,
And winne againe that thing which now is lost,
And leaue to seeke your countries ouerthrow.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford. They forsake Cade.

Cade Why how now, will you forsake your generall,
And ancient freedome which you haue possest,
To bend your neckes vnto their seruile yokes,
Who if you stir, will straightwaires hang you vp?

The first part of the contention of the two famous

But follow me, and you shall pull them downe,
And make them yeeld their liwings to your hands.

All. A Cade, a Cade.

They runne to Cade againe

Clif. Braue warlike friends heare me but speake a word,
Refuse not good, whilst it is offered you,
The King is mercifull, then yeeld to him,
And I my selfe will go along with you,
To Winsore castle whereas the King abides,
And on mine honor you shall haue no hurt.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford, God saue the King.

Cade. How like a feather is this rascall company
Blowne euery way,
But that they may see there wants no valiancy in me,
My staffe shall make way through the midſt of you,
And ſo a poxe take you all.

He runs through them with his staffe, and flies away.

Buck. Go ſome and make after him, and proclaime,
That thofe that can bring the head of Cade,
Shall haue a thouſand crownes for his labor.
Come march way.

Enter King Henry, and the Queene, and Somerset.

King. Lord Somerset, what news heare you of the rebel Cade?

Som. This my gracious lord, that the lord Say is don to deth,
And the cittie is almoſt ſackt.

King. Gods wil be done, for as he hath decreed, ſo it muſt be:
And be it as he pleafe, to ſtop the paide of thofe rebellious me.

Queene Had the noble Duke of Suffolke bin aliue,
The rebell Cade had bin ſuppreſt ere this,
And all the reſt that do take part with him.

Enter the Duke of Buckingham, and Clifford, with the rebells with haliers about their neckes.

Cliff. Long liue King Henry, Englands lawfull King,
Loe here my Lord, thofe rebells are subdued,
And offer their liues before your highnecſſe feete.

King But tell me Clifford, is their captaine here?

Cliff. No, my gracious lord, he is fled away, but proclamations

houses of Yorke and Lancaster.

ons are sent forth, that he that cā but bring his head, shal haue a thousand crownes. But may it please your maiesly, to pardon these their faults, that by that traitors meanes were thus misled.

King Stand vp you simple men, and giue God praise,
For you did take in hand you know not what,
And go in peace obedient to your King,
And liue as subiects, and you shall not want,
Whilst Henrie liues, and wearēs the English crowne.

All God sauē the King, God sauē the King.

King Come let vs haste to London now with speed,
That soleinne processions may be sung,
In laud and honor of the God of heauen,
And triumphs of this happy victory.

excuse omnes.

Enter Jacke Cade at one doore, and at the other, master Alexander Eyden and his men, and Jacke Cade lies downe picking of hearbs and eating them.

Eyden Good Lord how pleasant is this country lifet
This little land my father left me here,
With my contented mind, serues me as well,
As all the pleasures in the court can yeeld,
Nor would I change this pleasure for the court.

Cade Sounes, eres the Lord of the foile, stand villain, thou wilt betray me to the King, and get a thousand crowns for my head, but ere thou goest, ile make thee eat yron like an estridge, and swallow my sword like a great pin.

Eyden Why sawcy companion, why should I betray thee?
Ist not enough that thou hast broke my hedges,
And entred into the ground without the leaue of me the ow-
But thou wilt braue me too?

(ner,

Cade. Braue thee and beard thee too, by the best bloud of the realme, look on me well, I haue eate no meat this fwe daies, yet and I do not leaue thee and thy fwe men as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may neuer eate grasse more.

Eyden. Nay, it neuer shalbe said whilst the world doth stand, that Alexander Eiden an Esquire of Kent, took ods to combat with a famisht man, look on me, my lims are equall vnto thine, and euery way as big, then hand to hand ile combat thee. Sirra fetch fetch me weapons, and stand you all aside.*

Cade. Now sword, if thou hewst not this burly-boned churle into chines of beefe, I beseech God thou maist fall into some smiths hand and be turnd into hobnailes.

Eyden Come on thy way. They fight, and Cade falleth downe.

Cade Oh villain, thou hast slaine the floure of Kent for chi-ualry, but it is famine & not thee that has done it. for come ten thousand diuels, & give me but the ten meals that I wanted this fiue daies, and ile fight with you all, and so a pox rot thee, for Iacke Cade must die. he dies.

Eyd. Jack Cade, & was it that monstrous rebell which I haue slain: oh sword I honor thee for this, and in my chamber shalt thou hang as a monumēt to after age, for this great seruice thou haest done to me, ile drag him hence, and with my sword cut off his head and beare it with me. exit

Enter the Duke of Yorke with drum and soldiers.

Yorke In Armes from Ireland comes Yorke armaine,
Ring bells alowd, bonfires perfume the ayre,
To entertaine faire Englands royall King:
Ali sancta Maiesta, who would not buy thee deare?

Enter the duke of Buckingham.

But soft, who comes here? Buckingham, what news with him?

Buck Yorke, if thou meane wel, I greet thee so.

York Humphrey of Buckingham, welcome I sweare,
What comest thou in loue, or as a messenger?

Bu. I come as a messenger from our dread lord & soueraign
Henry, to know the reason of these Armes in peace?
Or that thou being a subiect as I am,
Shouldst thus approach so neare with colour spread,
Whereas the person of the King doth keepe?

York A subiect as he is!

O how I hate these spightfull abiect termes,
But Yorke, dissemble till thou meete thy sonnes,
Who now in Armes expect their fathers fight,
And farre hence I know they cannot be:
Humphrey Duke of Buckingham, pardon me,

That

29.

Actus, of Yorke and Lancaster.

That I answerd not at first, my mind was troubled,
I came to remoue that monstros rebell Cade,
And heauie proud Somerset from out the Court,
That basely yeelded vp the townes in France.

Buc. Why that was presumption on thy behalfe,
But if it be no otherwise but so,
The King doth pardon thee, and grants to thy request,
And Soinerset is sent vnto the Tower.

Yorke Vpon thine honour is it so?

Buc. Yorke, he is vpon mine honor.

Yorke Then before thy face, I here dismissse my troupes,
Sirs, meete me to morrow in saint Georges fields,
And there you shall receiue your pay of me.

exeunt soldiery.

Buc. Come Yorke, thou shalt go speake vnto the King,
But see, his grace is comming to meete with vs.

enter King Henry.

King How now Buckingham, is Yorke friends with vs
That thus thou bringst him hand in hand with thee?

Buc. He is my lord, and hath dischargde his troupes,
Which came with him, but as your Grace did say,
To heauie the duke of Somerset from hence,
And to subdue the rebels that were vp.

King Then welcome coosin Yorke, giue me thy hand,
And thankes for thy great seruice done to vs,
Against those traitorous Irish that rebeld.

enter master Eyden with Iacke Cades head.

Eyden Long liue Henry in triumphant peace,
Lo here (my Lord) vpon my bended knees,
I here present the traitorous head of Cade,
That hand to hand in single fight I slew.

King First, thankes to heauen, and next, to thee my friend,
That hast subdude that wicked traitor thus,
Oh let me see that head that in his life
Did worke me and my land such cruell spight!
A visage sterne, cole blacke his curled lockes,
Deepe trenched furrowes in his frowning brow,

The first part of the contention of the two famous
Presageth warlike humors in his life.
Here take it hence, and thou for thy reward,
Shalt be immediately created Knight:
Kneele downe my friend, and tell me whats thy name.

Eyden Alexander Eyden, if it please your grace,
A poore Esquire of Kent.

King Then rise vp sir Alexander Eyden Knight,
And for thy maintenance, I freely giue
A thousand markes a yeere for to maintaine thee,
Beside the firme reward that was proclaimde,
For those that could performe this worthy act,
And thou shalt waite vpon the person of the King.

Eyden I humbly thanke your grace, and I no longer liue,
Then I prooue iust and loyall vnto my King. exit.

Enter the Queene with the Duke of Somerset.

King O Buckingham, see where Somerset comes,
Bid him go hide himselfe till Yorke be gone.

Queene He shall not hide himselfe for feare of Yorke,
But beard aud braue him proudly to his face.

Yorke Who's that? proud Somerset at liberty?
Base fearful Henry that thus dishonor st me,
By heauen, thou shalt not governe ouer me,
I cannot brooke that traitors presence here,
Nor will I subiect be to such a King.
That knowes not how to governe, nor to rule,
Resigne thy crowne proud Lancaster to me,
That thou usurped hast so long by force,
For now is Yorke restoride to claime his owne,
And rise aloft into faire Englands Throne.

Somer. Proud traitor, I arrest thee on high treason, Against thy Soueraigne Lord, yeeld thee false Yorke,
For here I sweare thou shalt vnto the Tower,
For these proud words which thou hast giuen the King.

Yorke Thou art deceived, my sonnes shall be my baile,
And send thee there in spight of him.
Ho, where are you boyes?

Queene Call Clifford hither presently.

bomes, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Enter the Duke of Yorkes sonnes, Edward the Earle of March, and crooke-backe Richard, at the one doore, with drum and souldiers, and at the other doore, enter Clifford and his sonne, with drumme and souldiers, and Clifford kneeleth to Henry, and speakes.

Cliff. Long liue my noble Lord and soueraigne King.

Yorke. We thank thee Clifford:

Nay, do not affright vs with thy lookes,
If thou didst mistake, we pardon thee, kneele againe.

Cliff. Why, I did no way mistake, this is my King:
What is he mad? to Bedlam with him.

King. Yea, a bedlam franticke humor drives him thus,
To leavy Armes against his lawfull King.

Cliff. Why do not your grace send him to the Tower?

Queene. He is arrested, but will not obey,
His sonnes he saith shall be his suertie.

Yorke. How say you boyes, will you not?

Edward. Yes noble father, if our words wil serue.

Richard. And if our words will not, our swords shall.

Yorke. Call hither to the stake, my two rough beares.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himselfe.

Yorke. Call Buckingham, and all the frends thou hast,
Both thou and they shall curse this fatall houre.

Enter at one doore the Earle of Salsbury and Warwicke, with drums and souldiers: and at the other, the duke of Buckingham, with drum and souldiers.

Cliff. Are these thy beares? weel bayte them soone, Dispite of thee and all the friends thou hast.

War. You had best go dreame againe,
To keepe you from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolu'd to beare a greater storme,
Then any thou canst coniure vp to day,
And that ile write vpon thy Burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy houssholt badge.

War. Now by my fathers age old Neuells crewe,
The Rampant beare chaind to the ragged staffe,
This day ile weare aloft my burgonet,

The first part of the contention of the two famous

*As on a mountaine top the Cædar showes,
That keepes his leaues in spight of any storme,
Euen to affright thee with the view thereof.*

Clif. And from thy burgonet will I rend the beare,
And tread him vnderfoote with all contempt,
Dispight the Beare-ward that protects him so.

Yong Clif. And so renowned soueraigne to armes,
To quel these traitors and their complices.

Rich. Fie, charity for shame, speake it not in spight,
For you shall sup with Iesus Christ to night.

Yong Clif. Foule Stigmatike, thou canst not tell.

Rich. No, for if not in heauen, you lesurely sup in hel.

excent omnes.

Alarmes to the battaille, and then enter the duke of Somerset and Richard fighting, Richard kills him under the signe of the Castle in saint Albons.

Rich. So, lie thou there, and breathe thy last.
Whats here, the signe of the Castle?
Then the prophesie is come to passe,
For Somerset was forewarned of Castles,
The which he alwaies did obserue,
And now behold, vnder a paltry ale house signe,
The Castle in S. Albons,
Somerset hath made the Wissard famous by his death. exit.

Alarme againe, and then enter the Earle of Warwicke alone.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, tis warwicke calls,
And if thou dost not hide thee from the Beare,
Now whilst the angry Trumpets sound Alarmes,
And dead mens cries do fille the empty ayre:
Clifford I say, come forth and figh with me,
Prowd Northerne Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwicke is hoarse with calling thee to armes.

Clifford speakes within.

Warwicke stand still, and view the way that Clifford hewes with his murthuring curtelaxe, through the fainting troupes to find thee out.

War-

houſer, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Warwicke stand ſtill, and ſtirre not till I come.

Enter Yorke.

War. How now my Lord, what a foote?

Who kild your horſe?

Yorke The deadly hand of Clifford, noble lord,
Five horſe this day, ſlaine vnder me,
And yet braue Warwicke I remaine alive,
But I did kithis horſe he lou'de ſo wel,
The boniest gray that ere was bred in North.

Enter Clifford, and Warwicke offers to fight with him.

Hold Warwicke, and ſeeke thee out ſome other chace
My ſelfe will hunt this Deare to death.

War. Braue lord, tis for a crowne thou fightiſt,
Clifford farewell, as I enten to proſper wel to day,
It grieues my ſoule to leauē thee vnaſſaid. exit Warwicke.

Yorke Now Clifford ſince we are ſingled here alone,
Be thiſ the day of Doome to one of vs,
For now my heart hath ſworne immortall hate
To thee, and all the house of Lancaster.

Clif. And here I ſtand, and pitch my foote to thine,
Vowing neuer to stir, vþ thou or I be ſlaine,
For neuer ſhall my heart be ſafe at reſt,
Till I haue spoild the hatefull house of Yorke.

Alarmes, and they fight, and Yorke kills Clifford.

Yorke Now Lancaster ſit ſure, thy ſinewes shrinke,
Come fearefull Henry groueling on thy face,
Yeeld vp thy Crowne vnto the Prince of Yorke.

Yorke ſtrikes him downe, and dieth.

Alarmes, then enter yong Clifford alone.

yong Clif. Father of Comberland,
Where may I ſeeke my aged father forth?
O diſmall ſight! ſee where he breathleſſe lies,
All ſmeard and weltred in his luke-warne bloud,
Ah, aged pillar of all Comberlands true house,
Sweete father, to thy ſaundered Ghost I ſweare,

The first part of the contention of the two famours

Immortall hate vnto the house of Yorke,
Nor neuer shall I sleepe secur one night,
Till I haue fuiously reuengde thy death,
And lefft not one of them to breathe on earth.

He takes him vp on his backe.

And thus as olde Ankises sonne did beare
His aged father on his manly backe,
And fought with him against the bloudy Greckes:
Euen so will I: but stay, heres one of them,
To whom my soule hath sworne immortall hate.

Enter Richard, and then Clifford layes downe his father fightes with him, and Richard flies away againe.

Out croortbacke villaine, get thee from my sight,
But I will after thee, and once againe,
When I haue borne my father to his tent,
Ile trie my fortune better with thee.

exit yong Clifford with his father.

Alarmes againe, and then enter three or fourre, bearing the duke of Buckingham wounded to his Tent.

Alarmes still, and then enter the King and Queene.

Queene Away my Lord, and flie to London straight,
Make haste, for vengeance comes along with them,
Come, stand not to expostulate, lets go.

King Come then faire Queene, to London let vs haste,
And summon a parliament with speede,
To stop the fury of these dyre euents.

exceunt King and Queene.

Alarmes, and then a flourish, and enter the duke of Yorke and Richard.

Yorke How now boyes, fortunate this fight hath bee[n],
I hope to vs and ours, for Englands good,
And our great honor, that so long we lost,
Whilst faint-heart Henry, did usurpe our rights:
But did you see old Salsbury since we
With bloudy minds did buckle with the foe,
I would not for the losse of this right hand,
That ought but well betide that good old man.

Ricb.

houses, of Yorke and Lancaster.

Rich. My Lord, I saw him in the thickest throng,
Charging his lance with his old weary armes,
And thrice I saw him beaten from his horse,
And thrice this hand did set him vp againe,
And stil he fought with courage gainst his foes,
The boldest sprited man that ere mine eies beheld.

Enter Salsbury and Warwicke.

Edw. See noble father where they both do come,
The onely props vnto the house of Yorke.

Salsb. Well hast thou fought this day, thou valiant Duke,
And thou braue bud of Yorkes increasing house,
The small remainder of my weary life,
I hold for thee, for with thy warlike arme,
Three times this day thou hast preseru'de my life.

Yorke What say you Lords, the King is fled to London?
There (as I heare) to hold a Parliament.

What saies Lord Warwicke, shall we after them?

War. After them, nay before them if we can:
Now by my Faith Lords twas a glorious day,
Saint Albons battell wonne by famous Yorke,
Shal be eterniz'd in all age to come,
Sound Drums and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such daies as these to vs befall.      excunt.
